

With being added to the "no call list" it has cut down on our telemarketing calls, which is wonderful. Although we do still receive some. I would not want to see a change in the No Call List to be weakened by allowing companies to telemarket former customers for up to 18 months (or any amount of time) after cancellation. I feel if a person is interested in a service, etc. or charity for that matter, they will find a way to contact them. I hope this helps to keep the No Call List as it is, or even stronger to illiminate state residents to be contacted at all without a request to be contacted.
